

Star Chart for the Northern Horizon

To orient yourself with the stars, face north and rotate the chart until the current season shows at the bottom. The constellations at the bottom of the chart will be in the northern sky, while the stars at the top of the chart will be to the south. This is based on midnight stargazing. As the night progresses, the stars will appear to rotate counter-clockwise due to the rotation of the earth.